

Peter Hunt - September 1945

Peter Hunt's, right, corner Kiley Lane. Christian Science Church, left.
- September 1948 -

Oct. 1951

Disturbing and distressing is the word that Peter Hunt, much more a part of Provincetown than the monument or the wharf, almost as much a part as Commercial Street, will leave his favorite town, close out all of his holdings, including his Peasant Village, everything save his shore apartment, and move to his new place in Orleans, across the road from the Southward Inn. We weren't able to catch up with Peter today to determine just how far this story is true. We hope, like Mark Twain's reported death, it's greatly exaggerated. But it comes pretty straight, and it's hard to take.

1955 - YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO CAPE COD

In the small shops that huddle along the narrow streets of the Cape towns, one finds examples of the artistic self-expression of men and women, such as Peter Hunt in Provincetown, whose talent and ingenuity has made their hobby fascinating and profitable.