Work Starts Soon On Traffic Circle

John F. Noons, North Truro contractor, successful bidder for the construction of a traffic turn-around circle in Provincetown's West End, near the breakwater, says that he has received the approval of the State Department of Public Works and instructions to start work as soon as the survey has been completed. He plans to commence construction next Monday.

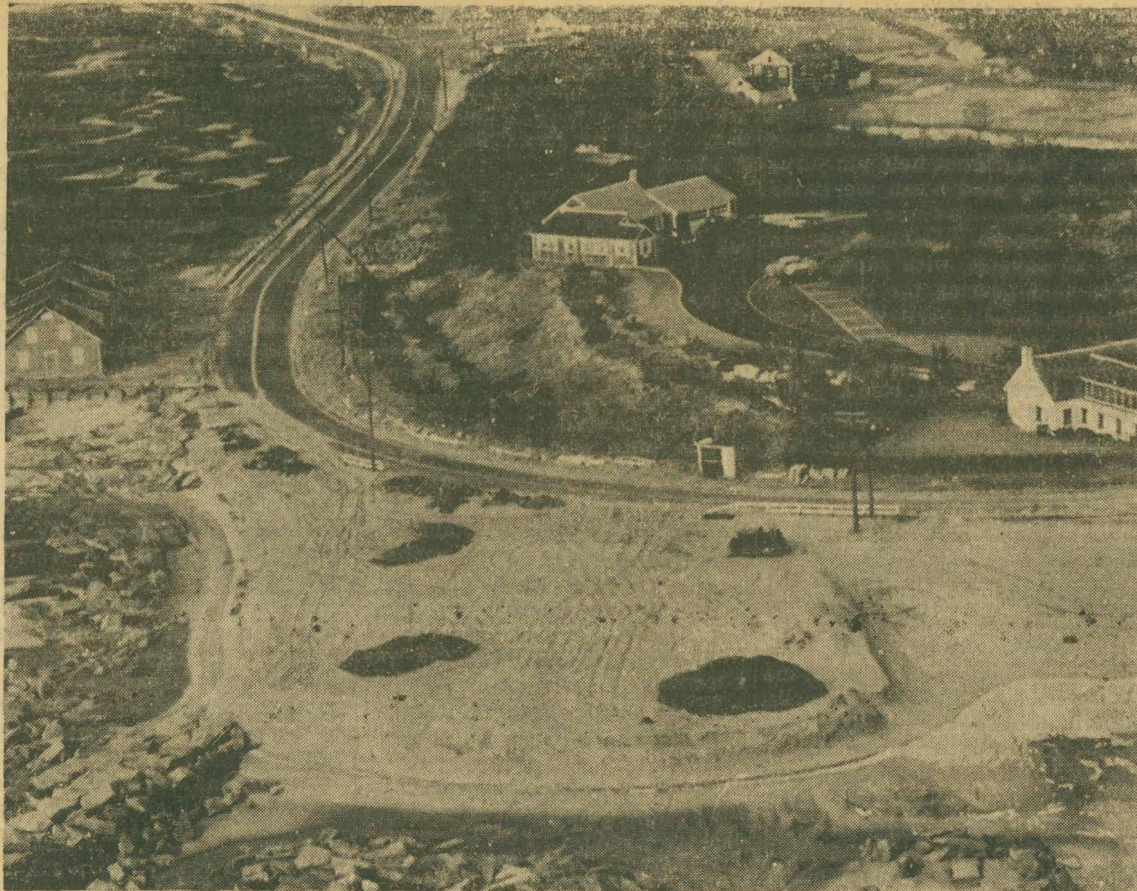

First step will be to fill and harden an area near the end of the breakwater for a 40-ton crane which is to be used in moving the heavy stones at the end of the breakwater. The red brick monument marking the First Landing Place of the Pilgrims will be moved to the center of the circle and three walks will lead to it from the circle. Earle Nickerson of Chatham has the contract for moving the monument.

Mr. Noones, who is doing the Jerome-Winthrop Street improvement under Chapter 90, said this job should be ready for the road base by Wednesday.

Work On West End Traffic Turn-Around Soon To Be Resumed

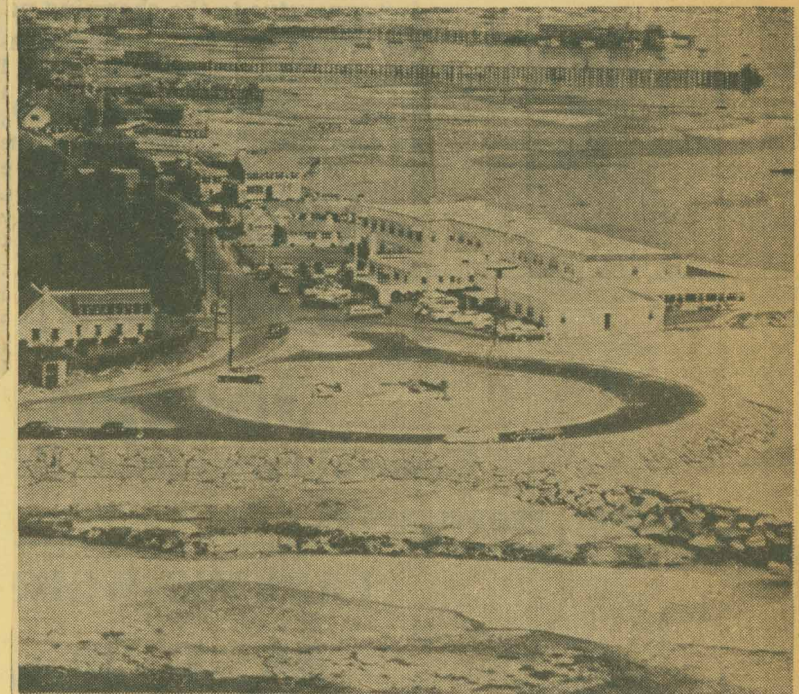

John D. Bell Photo

This is the way the proposed traffic turn-around at the West End near the Provincetown Inn looks at present. But Contractor John F. Noons of North Truro said yesterday that a crane is expected to arrive in a week and the last riprap will be put in place to retain the fill which will follow. He said that the job would be completed on schedule time by June 1.

New Rotary Expected To Aid Traffic

Provincetown-Boston Airline Photo

Opened for traffic this week was the new rotary at the West End which is expected to be a boon to traffic as soon as Commercial Street is made one-way from West Vine Street. Now being restored is the red brick memorial to the First Landing of the Pilgrims in the center of the large circular area. In the center of the picture is the Provincetown Inn with its new dress of white paint and above are town wharfs bare-legging out over the flats at low tide. At a traffic meeting Monday night all attending favored the one-way traffic on Commercial Street. Another hearing will be held in Caucus Hall Monday night.
